Still the Caudy Kid.
Ray Raymond, the original "Candy Kid." Who a few weeks ago packed his trunks and left this city as "Dare Devil Dan," turned up at the Bijou last night as Dick Weston, foreign correspondent of the Associated Press, the leading male character in "The Girl From the U. S. A." This is, of course, a tribute to his versatility and adaptability to the manners and customs of the various countries of the globe, but most of those who saw the performance last night would doubtless say that both he and his supporters have previously appeared to better advantage.

Though the change from a wild outlaw of the West to a perfectly respectable newspaper correspondent in foreign lands necessitated widely different apparel, he was nevertheless the same "Candy Kid" who has set the galleries wild heretofore with his audaclous de is. He was not alone in the gun play, and when saved from death in the midst of the harem of a Turkish prince by "Jack" Powers, the Girl from the U. S. A., the lovers of blood and thunder fairly went crazy, it is useless to say that he and Jack came out ahead; that the other lovers were joined after many tribulations, and the villains got their dues when the smoke from the guns of redoubtable American marines cleared away.

Gave Fine Recital.

A brilliant and fashionable audience gathered last night in the Jefferson Hotel Auditorium to enjoy the very fine song and plano recital, in which Mrs. Anne Atkinson Burmeister, planist; Miss Eloise Baylor, soprano, and Kirk Mathews, accempanist, took part

Many of the audience went from the concert to the Monday german. Their presence in ovening attire gave the impression of a blending of color tints and pretty faces that was specially attractive. Mrs. Burmejster was gowned in gray with sliver embroidery, Miss Baylor wore blue satin and pearls. The former fully sustained the reputation she has won of being a finished artist in her profession, her superb technique being matched by the beauty and delicacy of her touch and the force of her interpretation. Specially delightful numbers by her included a "Song Without Words," from Tschalkowsky: Liszt's "Sonnette de Peirarka No. 123," and Mendelssohn-Liszt's "On the Wings of Song."

Miss Baylor sang her way easily into the hearts of her audience, her voice soaring sweet and fresh and giving evidence of the finest training and culture, to add to the naturalness of its beauty and tenderness. It was difficult to discriminate between what she

Mr. Miller made a trip to a Virginia town on a matter of business. As he alighted from the train and walked toward the platform, a negro separated himself from the gang usually hanging around such places, lolled up, and offered to "tote" the satchel of the "drummer" to the hotel.

"Whar yer grip, sab?" he asked Mr. Miller. "I have nont," said the humorist. "Hi, an't yer a drummer?" queried the man. "Sure," replied Mr. Miller. Another of the lecture numbers in the Radcilife concert program arranged for this city will be given on Friday, February II, at the Academy, when Spiliman Riggs, humorous entrainer and character delineator, will provide a pleasant evening for a large audience.

Though there is enough of hard common sense in the Riggs talks to make them instructive as well as an using, tig lecturer-poet is essentially an entartainer, and devotes all his waried accomplishments to this chief object. His ready flow of picturesque language and his esse of delivery would class him among the popular orators of the day, and in addition, he is an impersonator of great skill and a musician. With this variety of entertainment sources to draw from Mr. Riggs is never at a loss, and the result has generally ocen an unusually agreeable and refreshing program. The sale of seats here has already been large enough to insure a good audience.
